(i) that at the end of regulation 5, add "(5) Political Economy";

(ii) that at the end of the chapter add the following as regulation 10—

"The examination in Political Economy shall include the Theory of Political Economy, Socialism, Trade Unionism, Currency and Banking, the Structure and Administration of an Indian Province, the Scope and Method of Political Economy, the Theory of International Trade and Foreign Exchanges."

The proposal being duly seconded was carried.

Mr. Towle then proposed the following syllabus for the M.A. degree in Economics in anticipation of the sanction of the regulations for that degree by the Senate and the Government—(Vide Appendix A.)

The proposal was duly seconded and carried.

5. Mr. Jones proposed that the report of the Sub-Committee, appointed by Faculty of Arts resolution No. 5, dated the 9th August, 1907, on the B.A. courses of study be adopted—(Vide Appendix B.)

Mr. Pirie seconded the proposal.

(a) Mr. Cameron moved that No. (iii) of the Sub-Committee's recommendations be amended and read as follows, viz. :—

"That a candidate for the B.A. degree should be required to pass a qualifying examination in English and to offer himself for examination in English Language and Literature or Classical Language and Literature and in any two of the following branches of study—Classical Languages, History, Political Economy, Mental and Moral Science, Mathematics, Modern Languages (for women only)."

Rev. Dr. Ewing seconded the amendment.

The discussion on the original proposal then ensued.

Mr. Pirie seconded the proposal.

Pandits Adityaram Bhattacharya and Ganga Nath Jha and Mr. Pandit spoke against the proposal;

7. With reference to Syndicate resolution No. 21, dated the 10th August, 1907, the meeting considered a letter, dated the 19th June, 1907, from the Principal, Isabella Thoburn College, Lucknow, suggesting that "French" be either dropped from the lists of subjects for the Matriculation and Intermediate examinations or it be added to the list of subjects for the B.A. examination.

8. The Registrar placed before the meeting the following resolutions of the Meeting of the Board of Studies in Indian Vernaculars held on the 8th November, 1907 :—

(a) that with reference to the selection of a course in the Parbatia language, the opinion of the members present was that no text-books can be prescribed because as far as their information goes suitable text-books are not as yet available ;

- (b) that with reference to the distribution of papers in the vernacular the sense of the meeting was that as a general rule, one paper is to be set in poetry and another in prose. That in Hindi the dramatic work is to be treated as prose text-book. Critical and grammatical questions to be set in both the papers ;
- (c) that with reference to the complaint forwarded by the Inspector of Schools, Moradabad, that the Hindi Course is difficult and heavy and the Urdu Course comparatively easy and light, the sense of the meeting was that the Hindi Course as it stands should not be reduced, as it was a suitable course for the Matriculation, but that some addition should be made to the Urdu Course to equalise the courses. As these Vernacular Courses are optional with the additional classical course, the quality and quantity of the former should be fairly matched with the latter.

It was resolved :—

- (i) that Parbatia be dropped from the list of Indian Vernaculars in Chapter XII, regulation 7 of the University Regulations ;
- (ii) that the recommendation as to the distribution of papers in the Vernacular be adopted, condensed and published in the University Prospectus.
- (iii) that steps be taken to make additions to the Urdu Course in order to equalise the Hindi and Urdu Courses.

APPENDIX B.

Report of the Sub-Committee appointed under resolution No. 89 of the Meeting of the Syndicate held on the 15th November, 1907, as amended and accepted by the Senate at its meeting held on the 13th January, 1908.

READ:—

- (i) Letter of the Chief Secretary to Government, U. P., No. 1514/III-416-1907, dated 7th October, 1907.
- (ii) Letter of the Government of India No. 2310-17, dated 24th August, 1907.

The Sub-Committee are of opinion as follows:—

I.—As to the proposed Imperial and Provincial Councils:—

- (a) that it will promote free discussion and frank expression of opinion if the meetings of the Councils are presided over by a non-official Chairman, but in view of the possible difficulties in the selection of such a Chairman in the case of the Imperial Advisory Council, which will comprise twenty ruling Chiefs among its members, the meetings of the said Council should, as proposed by the Government, be presided over by His Excellency the Viceroy, or some high official nominated by him, but in the case of the Provincial Advisory Council the meetings should be presided over by a non-official Chairman appointed by the Government;
- (b) that the scope of the work of the two Councils should not be limited to giving advice when asked, but that they should have the right to tender advice and also to invite the attention of the Government to matters which in their opinion call for the consideration of the Legislature or the Executive Government;
- (c) that meetings of the Council should be called whenever the Government thinks expedient, but at least once a year, and in the case of the Provincial Council on the request of not less than ten members;

- (d) that any measure against which three-fourths of the members vote should be deferred for further consideration for a year except when the Governor-General in Council declares the measure to be urgent ;
- (e) that the Government would get a more useful Imperial Advisory Council if its choice were not restricted, as appears to be the intention, to ruling Chiefs and territorial magnates and they would suggest that other persons of eminent position, such as retired High Court Judges, Vice-Chancellors and ex-Vice-Chancellors of Indian Universities, those who have rendered eminent services to the State, Prime Ministers of Native States, retired Civilians settled in the country, professional men of distinguished attainments, should also be eligible for appointment ;
- (f) that the general scheme as indicated in paragraph 6 of the letter of the Government of India, which requires that all interests of sufficient importance should be represented in the Provincial Council be approved and that the number suggested in the Chief Secretary's letter, viz, twenty-five for the Council is sufficient and that the various interests should be thus represented, viz :—
 - (a) Zamindars by 9 members.
 - (b) Capital, Industry and Commerce by 3 members.
 - (c) The University of Allahabad by 2 members.
 - (d) The professions by 2 members.
 - (e) Hindu, Muhammadan, Christian and Jain religions by 5 members.

The remaining members to be selected by the Government to represent any other interests which the Government considers should also be represented.

II.—As to Imperial and Provincial Legislative Councils :—

- (a) that the members appointed and elected should have a sufficient knowledge of English to be able to follow the discussions in Council and that all voters should be literate ;

- (b) that the electors for seats under section 12D (c) should be land-holders paying not less than Rs. 5,000 as Government revenue, or who own land assessed to Government revenue at the same amount, and also all persons paying income-tax on not less than Rs. 5,000. The candidates for membership should pay Rs. 25,000 or more on account of Government revenue or own land assessed to a like amount, or should pay income-tax on like amount ;
- (c) that as to paragraph 17 of the Government of India's letter the franchise in the case of Muhammadans appears to be unnecessarily low.

III.—As to paragraph 22 of the Government of India's letter :—

- (a) that there is much force in what is said in the concluding portion of a letter published in the Pioneer of the 2nd December, 1907, headed "Government Reform Proposals" and the Sub-Committee would deprecate the further extension of class representation ;
- (b) that with the time at the disposal of the Sub-Committee it is not possible to make detailed proposals as to para. 4 of the Chief Secretary's letter, but they would suggest that the claims of education as well as of the professions should be recognised, and that all graduates of not less than five years' standing should be entitled to vote for and should be eligible for election as members both of District and Municipal Boards. Subject to this they would retain the existing franchise and rules for the qualification of candidates for the Board ;
- (c) that residential and property qualifications for representation of Boards in the Legislative Council should be prescribed. In the case of representation of District Boards the proprietary qualifications should not be restricted to payment of land revenue, as this would exclude an important and daily increasing number of persons carrying on trade or business outside Municipal limits : they should be eligible, if paying a sufficient amount of income tax.

APPENDIX C.

Proceedings of the Sub-Committee appointed under Syndicate resolution No. 69, dated the 9th November, 1907.

PRESENT :

The Hon'ble Mr Justice Aikman, Vice-Chancellor.

The Hon'ble Justice Sir George Knox, Knight.

Mr. C. F. de la Fosse.

The Hon'ble Pandit Sundar Lal.

The Sub-Committee is of opinion :—

- (1) That all colleges affiliated to the University up to any standard in Arts or Science on the date Act No. VIII of 1904 came into force, should, subject to any limitation imposed by the order granting affiliation, be deemed to have been affiliated in respect of all subjects in which candidates could go up for examination in the said standard under the University Regulations then in force.
- (2) That such colleges are under section 20 of the said Act entitled to continue to exercise the rights conferred by such affiliation, save in so far as such rights may be withdrawn or restricted in the exercise of the power conferred by the said Act
- (3) That subject to the above a college which desires to add to the courses of instruction in respect of which it is affiliated should proceed under section 22 of the said Act.

APPENDIX D.

Report on the advisability and feasibility of appointing University lecturers to deliver courses of lectures on various subjects.

The Sub-Committee recommend that following the example of the University of Madras, the Allahabad University should appoint professors from affiliated colleges to deliver courses of lectures to graduates and teachers in English schools, employed in the High and Middle sections, on experimental mathematics, practical physics and chemistry and any other subject for instruction in which there may be a real demand. The lectures should be given at centres to be fixed by the University. Lecturers should be allowed, if necessary, assistants to help in giving individual attention to students engaged under the direction of the lecturer in practical work connected with the course of lectures. A register of attendance should be kept by the lecturer, and certificates of attendance at the course, signed by the lecturer and by the Registrar, should be given at the discretion of the lecturer. A syllabus of the lectures to be delivered should be printed and published by the University not less than two months before the time fixed for their delivery and should be sent to every Fellow of the University and to each affiliated college and recognised school, and notices of the date and place of the lectures should appear in the official Gazettes and in the leading newspapers within the territorial limits of the Allahabad University. The course should not ordinarily extend beyond twelve days. The question of remuneration is perhaps one to be determined by the Finance Committee of the Syndicate, but Rs. 100 for each lecture and the practical work connected therewith does not appear to be excessive. The Assistant Lecturer should be paid at the rate of Rs. 20 for each day upon which he is employed to assist. A fee of Rs. 10 should be paid to the Registrar in advance for admission to the course and the Registrar's receipt presented to the lecturers on the first day of the course. It will be necessary before the University proceeds to appoint lecturers for the Senate to make regulations providing for their appointment and duties under section 25 (e) of the Indian Universities Act, 1904.

11. The Minutes of the Meeting of the Faculty of Arts held on the 9th March, 1908, were confirmed.

12. With reference to Faculty of Arts resolution No. 5, dated the 10th January, 1908, viz., "that women candidates only should be allowed to offer a Modern European Language as an optional subject for the B.A. degree," the Registrar placed before the Meeting the following resolution No. 80, of the Meeting of the Syndicate held on the 7th March, 1908, on the subject:—

"that the Syndicate point out to the Faculty that the matter referred to in the resolution involves a change in the regulations of which due notice should be given."

It was resolved that the Syndicate resolution be recorded.

13. With reference to Faculty of Arts resolution No 8 (i), dated the 10th January, 1908, viz., "that Parbatia be dropped from the list of Indian Vernaculars in Chapter XII, regulation 7 of the University Regulations," the Registrar reported the following Syndicate resolution No 82 (a), dated the 7th March, 1908, on the same:—

"that the resolution regarding Parbatia being dropped from the list of Vernaculars in Chapter XII, regulation 7 of the University Regulations, be referred back to the Faculty as the matter involves a change in the regulations of which due notice should be given."

It was resolved that the Syndicate resolution be recorded.

14. The Meeting considered the following proposal by Mr. Cameron:—

"That in the opinion of this Faculty it is desirable to amend regulation 7, Chapter IV, of the Regulations of the University so as to make it read as follows:—

7. Each Board of Studies shall meet in March to draw up suggestions of courses for adoption in the subjects with which the Board is concerned. The courses suggested shall be printed and circulated to the members of the respective Faculties. All remarks or proposals connected therewith shall be communicated to the Conveners of the various Boards by the end of September and shall be considered at Meetings of the Boards convened, if necessary, for that purpose, in November. The recommendations of each Board shall then be reported to the Faculty by which it was elected and the Faculty shall forward each such report with its own report thereon to the Syndicate. If the Syndicate are of the opinion that the action of a Faculty regarding text-books or courses of study requires re-consideration, it shall refer the matter back to the Faculty. In cases of disagreement after second reference, the matter shall be referred to the Senate for decision."

Mr. Cameron pointed out that sufficient deliberation is necessary in the matter of selection of text-books. This is impossible under the present system. The result is that books are sometimes selected touching the religious susceptibilities of certain communities; the courses selected are sometimes too long and at times too short. In the system proposed members of the Faculties will have ample time to consider the courses of studies before they are brought forward for discussion at the Faculty Meeting.

The Rev. Dr. Ewing seconded the proposal.

- (i) The Director of Public Instruction, U. P. (Mr de la Fosse) proposed as an amendment that the sentence "The recommendations of each Board shall then be reported to the Faculty by which it was elected and the Faculty shall forward each such report with its own report thereon to the Syndicate" in the proposed regulation should read as follows :—

"The recommendations of each Board shall then be reported to the Faculty by which it was elected and the Faculty shall forward its report thereon to the Syndicate."

The amendment was seconded by Mr. T. C. Jones and carried.

- (ii) The Hon'ble Sir George Edward Knox moved as a second amendment that in the proposed regulation the sentence "The courses suggested shall be printed and circulated to the members of the respective Faculties" should read "The courses suggested shall be printed and circulated to all the Fellows and co-opted members of the Faculties."

The amendment was duly seconded and carried.

- (iii) The Hon'ble Rai Sundar Lal Bahadur moved as a third amendment that the words "except when otherwise directed by the Syndicate the report shall be sent to the Registrar in time to allow of its being printed and circulated to the members of the Syndicate before the next Meeting" be inserted after the word "Syndicate" in the sentence "The recommendations of each Board shall then be reported Syndicate."

The amendment was seconded by Mr. Pandit and carried.

Mr. Cameron's proposal, as now amended, was then put to the vote and carried.

15. Mr. Cuthbertson Jones proposed : —

"That in the opinion of the Faculty, Chapter X of the revised University Regulations should be so altered as to make it clear that Hostels under the direct control and management of the authorities of our affiliated Colleges need not be placed upon the list of licensed Hostels."

The Rev. Mr. Haythornthwaite seconded the proposal.

(Mahamahopadhyaya Pt. Adityaram Bhattacharya pointed out that the proposal involves purely a question of administration and should therefore be considered by the Syndicate.

The Chairman ruled that under regulation 12, Chapter III, of the University Regulations, the proposal could be considered by the Faculty).

Mr. Pandit proposed that to meet the case, the words "not in residence in a College" be inserted between the words "student" and "who" in the first line of regulation 1, Chapter X of the University Regulations.

Shams-ul-Ulama M. Syed Amjad Ali seconded the proposal which was then put to the vote and carried. 11 votes were given for and 7 against the proposal.

SUGGESTIONS FOR THE M.A. COURSE IN ENGLISH.

CANNING COLLEGE:

Lucknow, October 16th, 1908.

To

THE CONVENER OF THE BOARD OF STUDIES IN ENGLISH.

DEAR SIR,

May I call your attention to the following sketch of a course of studies in English Literature for the M.A. Degree?

Paper I.—Social and Literary History of England from 1100.

- | | |
|---|-------------------------------------|
| „ II.—The Drama. | } Typical texts up to 19th century. |
| „ III.—Poetry. | |
| „ IV.—Prose. | |
| „ V (a).—Literary Criticism, or | |
| „ V (b).—Language and Literature prior to 1100. | |
| „ VI (a).—Modern (19th century) Poetry, or | |
| „ VI (b).—Language and Literature, 1100—1500 with special study of Chaucer. | |
| „ VII (a).—Modern (19th century) Prose, or | |
| „ VII (b).—Historical English Grammar. | |
| „ VIII.—Essay. | |

N.B.—(1) Candidates who offer V (a) must also offer VI (a) and VII (a) and candidates who offer V (b) must also offer VI (b) and VII (b).

(2) In papers II, III, IV, VI (a), VII (a), V (b), VI (b) questions on Unseen Passages from similar texts shall be set and shall carry 30 marks.

Notes on the above.

This proposed course differs from that in operation in the following points:—

- (1) The classification of the Papers is more logical and more appropriate to the subject. It affords better guidance for systematic study.
- (2) There is a distinct section created for the study of Literary Criticism. No special study of Literature can be said to aim at completeness unless it includes some first hand acquaintance with the manner in which the great critics have done their work. This is all that is intended. There is no intention of asking for or even expecting Literary Criticism.

(3) There is no paper in Unseens but, instead, the Unseen Passage is made an integral part of the Chief Papers where Text-books are prescribed. This defines more closely the nature and function of the Unseen Passage, making it a test of how far the knowledge of the Text has made the student able to read similar texts.

(4) The History Paper is more closely defined—(a) The term Social History makes it apparent that when History is included as an adjunct to the study of literature the more purely political and constitutional History is of less account; (b) The History of Literature is given a definite and recognised place instead of being so loosely distributed that the candidates can with safety ignore it.

In making the following suggestions of Text-books for the above course I have endeavoured, as far as possible, to embody the Text-books of the present course with a view to minimising the change just at first. The paper in Literary Criticism is, of course, new, but as it replaces Paper III—Special Section, Tennyson, I have kept that paper in view in estimating how much might fairly be included. The suggestions for this new paper are put forward only in a tentative way and rather as an illustration of the kind of study I mean, than as a deliberate opinion that no better books are to be found for the purpose.

Text-books.

Paper I.—The following works are recommended—Green's History of the English People; Travill's Social England; Taine's History of English Literature (Introduction only); Saintsbury's History of English Literature.

„ II.—Marlowe's Faustus; Shakespeare's King Lear, Henry V; Milton's Samson Agonistes.

„ III.—Chaucer's Prologue; Spenser's Faerie Queen, Bk. I, Milton's Comus; Lycidas; L'Allegro; Il Penseroso, Pope's Essay on Criticism.

Paper IV.—Sir Philip Sidney's Defence of Poesie ; Bacon's Essays ; Sir Thos. Browne's Religio Medici ; Addison's
Spectator Papers.

" V (a).—Aristotle's Rhetoric, Bk. III and Poetic ; Dryden's Essay on Dramatic Poetry ; Johnson's Life of Pope and Dryden ; Coleridge's Literary Criticism

" V (b).—

" VI (a).—(As at present.)

" VI (b).—

" VII (a).—(As at present.)

" VII (b).— " " "

I am,

Yours truly,

MATT. B. CAMERON.

APPENDIX H.

Record of the Meeting of Board of Arabic and Persian held on the 9th November, 1908.

Chiefly to consider whether or not any changes in the various Arabic and Persian-Arabic texts or courses were needed for the University Examinations in 1911.

I. Dr. Horovitz's proposals for changes in Arabic texts from Matriculation to the M.A. Degree were laid before the Meeting.

Resolved that the consideration of these proposals be postponed and that for the year 1911 no changes should be made in either Arabic or Persian-Arabic texts throughout, saving some in the B.A. Persian-Arabic text as follows :—

II. Read Shams-ul-Ulama Abdul Jalil's (Professor of Arabic and Persian, Government College, Benares) letter, proposing to omit the last 31 pp. of the Arabic portion from the Persian-Arabic B.A. course.

Resolved that it should be accepted Further that this change be recommended for 1910 as well.

III. Complaints of schools that Majanil Adab, selections from which are prescribed for the Matriculation Examination in Arabic in 1910, is not procurable in India, that the publishers of the book, at Beyrout (Syria), were not prepared to sell one or two parts of the book, and that they would sell the whole series in six parts and not piecemeal.

Resolved that the Faculty of Arts be asked to recommend to the Syndicate to purchase the complete set, and the University should publish the required parts of this book thoroughly vocalised for the Arabic students, at such price as they should be able to afford.

IV. In the opinion of this Board the combination of Arabic and Persian as a single classical course is neither wise nor successful.

They believe that a pure Persian course can be constructed of equal difficulty with Arabic or any other classical language, and advise that the Faculty of Arts recommend to the Senate that a pure Persian course be substituted for that of Persian with Arabic.

Regarding the third resolution of the Board the Convener has great doubt as to its feasibility within the short time the Arabic candidates of 1910 have to prepare the other half of their Arabic course.

The right solution of their complaint can easily be met by prescribing the remaining half of Amjad Ali's Arabic Selection with Kashful Mukhabba (كشف المخبيا) for their rapid reading as they had had formerly, and withdrawing Majanil Adab (مجانى الادب) which they are unable to procure and which was lately substituted for this very half of Amjad Ali's Arabic Selections.

AMJAD ALI,

Convener, Board of Studies in Arabic and Persian.

ENCLOSURE—1.

Copy of letter, dated 9th April, 1908, from Miss F. L. Nichols, Principal, Isabella Thoburn College, Lucknow, to the Registrar, University of Allahabad.

I HAVE the honour to call your attention to two regulations for the admission of girls to the Intermediate classes which allow students to take College work for which they are not prepared.

1. Chapter XI, para. 3 (a) (ii), says that students are admitted to College who have passed the Final Examination of European Schools.

I have an application from a girl, who passed the Final Examination in December 1907, from Wellesley High School, Naini Tal. She passed but has failed in Latin, Euclid and Men-uration. According to the rules, I cannot refuse to admit her, but she is not prepared for College work.

2. In Chapter XII, para. 4, because of the special concession to women, a girl may take for the Matriculation, her own Vernacular and Drawing, having no Classical Language or Science. Last year such a candidate joined the first year but was unable to do the work.

For the reputation of College work for girls, I hope that these regulations may be changed.

SIR,

I HAVE the honour to forward herewith a copy of letter No. 84, dated 24th October, 1908, from the Principal, Isabella Thoburn College, Lucknow, and to request you kindly to bring, if you see no objection, the letter to the notice of the Faculty at its next meeting.

ENCLOSURE—1.

Copy of a letter No 34, dated 24th October, 1908, from Miss R E. Robinson, Acting Principal, Isabella Thoburn College, Lucknow, to this office

I HAVE the honour to suggest that a change be made in the requirements for the B A Examination in Women's Colleges. Inasmuch as very few girls have a natural aptitude for Mathematics, and as a girl who enters the College without a Classical Language has no alternative but Mathematics for the B A degree, I have the honour to suggest that the requirements as laid down in the last paragraph of the University Prospectus for 1910 be amended by allowing candidates from Women's Colleges to offer themselves for an examination in English and any two subjects in Group B, or, in English and any two subjects in Group C or, (1) in English, (2) any one subject in Group B, and (3) any one subject in Group C, this will not exclude Mathematics from the curriculum for girls, but will give them a wider choice of subjects

It was resolved that the Faculty of Science understand that the matter is being dealt with by the Faculty of Arts and consider that no action is necessary on their part

19. The Hon'ble Mr. McRobert pointed out that there are two Colleges in Agriculture within the territorial jurisdiction of this University and that the time has now come to institute a B Sc degree with Agricultural Chemistry as one of the subjects.

It was resolved that the Faculty of Science is of opinion that the time has come for consideration of the question of conferring a degree or diploma in Agriculture and that a Sub-Committee consisting of

APPENDIX C.

ALLAHABAD CHRISTIAN COLLEGE :

Allahabad, August 20th, 1908.

To

THE DEAN OF THE SCIENCE FACULTY,

ALLAHABAD UNIVERSITY.

SIR,

While not a member of the Science Faculty, I trust you will permit me as Principal of a College to suggest that examination questions for students in Biology should be so arranged that it will not be necessary for them, in order to qualify for the B.Sc. degree, to take up those portions of Physics which involve Mathematics. This could doubtless be arranged by alternative questions, but into the method I need not enter as I am confident that it will be sufficient to have called your attention to this point.

Yours faithfully,

A. H. EWING, PH.D.,

Principal.

APPENDIX D.

ALLAHABAD CHRISTIAN COLLEGE :

Allahabad, August 18th, 1908.

To

THE DEAN OF THE SCIENCE FACULTY,

ALLAHABAD UNIVERSITY.

SIR,

Hearing that there is to be a change in the course in Biology, I would like to propose the following for consideration :—

For I Year.—General Botany, with laboratory work.

„ II Year.—General Zoology with elementary Physiology and laboratory work.

„ III Year.—Anatomy half year; Embryology half year.

„ IV Year —Any two of the following :—

Practical Histology, Bacteriology, Osteology, Astronomy, Geology, Palæontology, Physiology, or other course in which the instructor is a specialist.

My reasons for proposing such a course are—the failure of the present course to meet the needs of the case. It is not possible to teach properly the present course in two years. The present course covers ground that takes four years in London University, in Toronto University, in Yale, Harvard, Princeton, among American institutions. Few men in British Universities take both Botany and Zoology with equal thoroughness. The course has been found so comprehensive that in the Allahabad Christian College the work has been given to two men, one taking the Botany and one the Zoology.

For instance, the general anatomy of lizard, fowl, and a mammal is called for. This is in itself half a year's work if the student does his own dissecting and drawing.

Again take Embryology and Histology. If the student gets out his own slides and makes his own preparations (and if he does not do this I fail to see the use of the course) these two subjects will at the very least take three months each. Bacteriology is another similar subject.

If a list of standard text-books on the subjects required be set before us we find that—

Thomson in Zoology consists of pp. 812.

Flower in Osteology, 373

Lowsan in Botany, 442.

Stirling in Histology, 405.

Hertwig in Embryology, 653.

Geikie in Geology, 412.

Woods in Palæontology, 328.

In Bacteriology about 3,400 pp.

To this list of standard works which are absolutely necessary are to be added special chapters from other works which also must be read by the student if he wishes to be at all familiar with his subject. For example, Marshall on the "Frog." This great amount of reading has to be supplemented by laboratory work which at a low estimate ought to be six hours per week.

The present course cannot be adequately dealt with in two years, so each teacher emphasises his special portion of the subject and slights the others. Now unless the teacher's speciality coincide with the speciality of the examiner the result is likely to be disastrous to the student.

For example, in the last University Examination in Biology not one question was asked in the subject of Bacteriology, not one question in Palæontology, one very general question in Geology, one very general question in Embryology. As in both papers nine questions are offered and only seven are to be attempted, it was possible for a student to pass Biology without touching one of these four great required subjects. It was also possible for a student who knew these four subjects thoroughly to fail as out of the four subjects he had only two questions. If his teacher had laid stress on these four and slighted the rest the man was in an unfortunate position. This leads me to remark that each subject should have a highest possible number of marks with a pass mark in each subject.

I hope it will not be thought that I am arguing for a reduction of the course. I am not, but I am arguing that more time is necessary for it to be properly taught and fairly grasped by the student.

Then as to the work of the fourth year. Such a large variety of subjects is offered because nearly every man who has done advanced work in Biology has done it along some special line and he could go over some of this ground with his students and get into them the spirit of true research and enthusiasm which is the joy of the teacher and also of the student. The present course instead of clearing up a man's difficulties and giving him something of accuracy and thoroughness simply muddles him, and in despair instead of learning to think he is compelled to devote himself to cramming.

I am,

Yours truly,

SAM HIGGINBOTTOM.

APPENDIX C.

Report of the Sub-Committee appointed by the Senate at its Meeting held on 12th March, 1906, under resolution No. IX of the said Meeting.

PRESENT :

The Hon'ble Justice Sir George Edward Knox, Kt.

The Hon'ble Mr. Justice Karamat Husain.

Dr. Ewing

Dr. Satish Chander Banerji.

Pandit Sundar Lal.

Dr. Hill.

1. The Government of the United Provinces by its letter No. ⁷⁷ XV-394A/2, dated 19th January, 1906, has granted a sum of "Rs. 20,000 per annum for four years towards building an University Library." The letter was laid before the Senate at its Meeting held on 12th March, 1906, at which a Sub-Committee was appointed to—

"(a) select a suitable site for a University Library and report thereon to the Syndicate:

(b) to formulate a scheme for the application of the grant made by the Government towards the building of such a Library and report the same to the Syndicate."

2. In the course of the discussion which preceded the appointment of the Sub-Committee, the Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya suggested the desirability of co-operating with the Committee of the Allahabad Public Library. The Sub-Committee therefore invited Dr. Hill, Secretary of the Allahabad Public Library, to help them with his views at their sitting held on 11th November, 1908. The convener of the Sub-Committee also invited the Fellows of the University to favour them with their suggestions regarding the scheme, and the opinions received in response to this invitation were considered at the Meeting.

3. On the question of the site, the following proposals were brought forward for discussion, viz :—

- (A) a proposal to build another wing to the Thornhill and Mayne Memorial buildings in the Alfred Park for use as University Library,
- (B) another proposal to build it in the compound of the Muir Central College, and
- (C) a proposal to build it on the site of No. 8, Church Road, which has recently been purchased by the University.

4. In connection with proposal A it was suggested that the Allahabad Public Library (which is now located in the Memorial buildings) and the University Library should both be placed in charge of one thoroughly competent Librarian, the right of the public to use the Allahabad Public Library section as heretofore being reserved to them.

5. The Sub-Committee is strongly of opinion that the University Library and the other University buildings such as the Senate Hall, the Registrar's Office, etc., should all be located in one place and that plans for these buildings (including the Library) should be obtained in the first instance. The cost of the construction of the existing Mayne and Thornhill Memorial building was about a lakh and a half and the wing proposed to be added will perhaps absorb the entire grant made by the Government. The Sub-Committee therefore are unable to recommend proposal A.

6. Proposal B cannot, for similar reasons, be recommended.

7. As to proposal C, the site has been approved by the Government for the University Law School, or the University Library, for whichever purpose it may be utilised. The University Library should, if possible, be located in some central position in the civil station of Allahabad which should be conveniently accessible to the members of the staff of the Colleges affiliated to the University in Allahabad, and to the graduates and Fellows of the University by whom it will be largely used. The site proposed does not seem to be quite suitable from this point of view, while it appears to be admirably suited for the University School of Law. The locality best suited for the Library and other University buildings seemed to be the plot of land on which the Police Training School (now removed to Moradabad), the General European Hospital (now removed to its new building) and the Reserve Police Lines and hospital are at present located.

The Sub-Committee is not in possession of any information as to the possibility of the said plot, or a sufficient portion of it, being made available for the purposes of the University. In the absence of such information and in view of the superior advantage of the site just named if it can be secured the Sub-Committee do not think it expedient to proceed at once to the selection of a site or to formulate a scheme for the application of the grant made by Government further than what follows in the report.

8. The Sub-Committee would therefore recommend to the Syndicate :—

- (a) That it should approach the Government, with the object of ascertaining whether the site of the present Reserve Police Lines, etc., or a sufficient portion of it, can be placed at the disposal of the University.
- (b) That plans and estimates for the University buildings (with the Library as a part of it) be obtained before entering on the construction of a building for the proposed Library.

9. The University at present possesses a small Library, consisting of books presented by the publishers or purchased by the University which is located in the Registrar's office. The Committee recommend that in the meanwhile to meet the urgent needs of the situation the University should approach the Government with an offer to take charge of the Allahabad Public Library and supplement the Government grant for it, by such sum as will be sufficient to secure the services of a thoroughly competent Librarian. The University Library should for the present be removed to the Mayne and Thornhill Memorial buildings, and be placed in charge of a common Librarian for both, the public being permitted the use of the Allahabad Public Library section on the terms on which they are now permitted to use it.

CONVOCATION SPEECH.

CONVOCATION, NOVEMBER 14th, 1908.

The Hon'ble the Vice-Chancellor having declared Convocation open, the Arts, Science and Law Graduates of the year 1908 were admitted to their respective Degrees in the usual manner.

His Honour the Chancellor then addressed Convocation—

MR. VICE-CHANCELLOR AND MEMBERS OF THE SENATE,

WITH the interesting address which he delivered at last Convocation your late Vice-Chancellor, the Hon'ble Pandit Sundar Lal, Rai Bahadur, brought to a close a term of office which is likely to be long remembered as a period of progress on the part of the University. None of the distinguished men who have been connected with the Allahabad University since its foundation has served it more constantly and devotedly than he. It was therefore peculiarly fitting that my predecessor, Sir James LaTouche, should have selected him for the office of Vice-Chancellor during the critical and important period which followed the passing of the Universities Act of 1904 and the framing of new regulations under it. His unique knowledge of the business of the University, and of the origin and history of the changes that have from time to time occurred, gave him a pre-eminent claim to take the helm at such a juncture. Owing to the despatch with which the regulations were revised in order to bring them into conformity with the new Universities Act within the specified time, it was inevitable that they should show some signs of the haste with which they had to be prepared. The period of the late Vice-Chancellor's administration was therefore largely taken up in modifying and supplying omissions in the regulations and in settling controversies upon important matters in which, as it soon became apparent, finality had not been reached. It must be to him a source of great satisfaction that most of the difficulties that in consequence arose were either solved during his time or left well advanced on the road to solution before he quitted office.

I am very grateful to you, Mr. Vice-Chancellor, for having yielded, with some reluctance, to my repeated request to undertake a second term of office. A new generation has occupied the stage since I sat at your feet on my first arrival in India more than 30 years ago. I early learned to place complete reliance on your knowledge, uprightness, tact and judgment, and these qualities have been in the past year, as it is certain that they will be in the coming one, of the greatest service to the University.

It is usual in an address to the Convocation to refer first to the personal changes that have taken place in the governing body and then to proceed to review the important events of the past year. On the present occasion there are not many changes to record in the constitution of the Senate. The Venerable G. A. Ford resigned his Fellowship on his retirement from the office of Archdeacon, and Rao Bahadur Waman Rao Kolhatkar also resigned. The year has passed without a death among the Fellows of the University, but the Nawab Mohsin-ul-Mulk, who had long been a prominent figure in educational gatherings in the Province, passed away shortly before the last Convocation. Messrs. E. F. Harris, Vishnu Moreswar Mahajani, and Atul Chandra Chatterji have succeeded the aforesaid Fellows. Mr. A. C. Datta, who had proved himself a useful member of the Faculty of Science, is now employed at Rajshahi and has tendered his resignation. A Fellow will be elected in his place by the Faculty concerned.

The question whether the methods of education which we follow in India are really suited to the country has been the subject of much public discussion during the past year. Our educational system has raised a debate in the House of Commons, and numerous critics have attacked it on the ground that it gives too much encouragement to purely literary study. I hope that, in view of these criticisms, I shall be pardoned for using this occasion to make a somewhat wide sweep of educational matters with a view to dealing with the position of the University in relation to the general scheme of education in these Provinces. The charge that our system of education is too literary is neither new nor unfounded. It has been in people's mouths ever since the Education Commission completed their inquiries a quarter of a century ago. That Commission, it will be remembered, commented severely upon the one-sided nature of the studies pursued, and advocated as a remedy a system for the bifurcation of studies. Again the Government of India, in reviewing the Universities' Commission's Report, showed how the truth of the charge had been driven home by giving prominence to their confident anticipation that the majority of the changes recommended by the Commission would have the effect of improving the quality and enlarging the scope of all forms of higher education in India. The Supreme Government expected that these changes would open to the use of the people of the country lines of activity and prospects of employment for which their training up to that time had failed to equip them, and that they would directly promote the intellectual advancement of the upper classes and, both directly and indirectly, lead to the development of the resources and industries of India. Six years have passed away since these words were written, and it will be interesting to look around and see how far the anticipations expressed in them have either been realized or are in process of realization. To complete our survey for this purpose it is necessary to examine not only the work of the University, but also that of the Government, for it is patent that we cannot obtain a proper understanding of the complex problems which University education presents in India unless we regard it in relation to those other forms of education with which it is or should be inseparably connected. There is a temptation for an Indian University to regard itself as an institution apart from the general system of education, and to pursue the even tenour of its way intent upon its own work and seemingly unconcerned with what goes on around it. In their academic seclusion the Universities have sometimes laid themselves open to the charge of paying too little heed to the rapidly-changing conditions of the modern world, and to the ever-growing demand of the Indian community for a wider range of studies in more direct relation to the business of life, they have seemed at times to make but a slight response. They can hardly be expected to lead the way alone towards a more practical form of education. The course of study in the schools must, indeed, of necessity depend on the character of a student's acquirements upon which the University is prepared to set its seal, but there is no reason to assume that any Indian University will not be ready to recognize and encourage any form of education which the conditions of the time and the aspirations of the people may prove to be desirable. If, then, it is the duty of the University to accommodate itself to such changes by altering the nature of its tests, it is equally incumbent on the Government, which has the control of State schools, and the general oversight of all others, to anticipate any movement of the University by revising the curriculum of the schools with the object of assimilating it to fresh circumstances and new aims. Accordingly, when we attempt to reckon up the progress made towards improving our system of education, we must begin by ascertaining what the State itself has done towards this end.

I do not propose to enter with any detail into the question of primary education, since the University is chiefly interested in the instruction in secondary schools directly leading up to the college classes; but I cannot let the occasion pass without insisting that the extension of primary education, and the creation of a good system of female education, both primary and secondary, which, while avoiding the denationalization of Indian women, will endeavour to train up girls of all classes to be good mothers, efficient housewives and housekeepers, are among the most urgent educational needs in these provinces. There is hardly any limit to the amount that can be spent, and spent profitably on these two objects if only the requisite funds can be made available.

In the matter of secondary education, two steps which may be expected to be productive of momentous results have been recently taken by the Government. They are, first, the decision to have a Government high school in each district as a model, and, secondly, the establishment of a system of examination for a school-leaving certificate. You will readily understand that my own hope and belief is that both these measures will operate for the greatest good on the higher education of the Province. There has been a rush for English education in the last few years with the result that the high schools at the headquarters of districts, hitherto generally managed by the District Boards, have been filled to excess, particularly in the lower classes, and that they have not confined themselves to secondary education but have also had primary classes under instruction at the same time. Now it is plain that such a system as this does not tend towards a sound and thorough form of education. The Government has accepted the duty of providing in each district a high school in which the teaching is conducted according to approved methods, and it is evident that, if a school is to be a model school, it must not attempt to teach more pupils than the establishments that can be provided are capable of instructing. Consequently we have had to decide that, while none of the boys on the register when Government takes over a district high school should be excluded, it is necessary, when considering applications to enter such a school, that the numbers should be brought down to a figure that can be properly taught. I fear that this has not been always understood, and that some misapprehension is abroad to the effect that Government is anxious to reduce the facilities for higher education. I wish to say in the most emphatic manner that Government has no such intention, but that it is determined to do its best to see that boys educated in the schools which it intends to maintain as model schools shall be educated in a thoroughly efficient manner. I may mention, as an instance of the inconveniences of the system which we are trying to remedy, that the Gorakhpur district high school was recently found by the Director of Public Instruction to have on its rolls 512 boys, although, under the rule regarding accommodation laid down in the Educational Code, the maximum number of pupils admissible was 427. Not only so, but in order to cope with the multitude of pupils many other code rules were being ignored. Four classes containing 125 scholars were accommodated in a hall capable of holding 85; the noise was described by the Director as "deafening," and the teachers could only make themselves heard by out-yelling each other. In 7 other class-rooms the number of scholars was in excess of the number for which there was accommodation, and classes had overflowed into the verandahs. This may be an extreme case, but it is not an unique one. It needs no words of mine to show that boys cannot be properly educated or even educated at all, in surroundings such as these. The Government cannot undertake to provide more than one high school in a district. It considers that its responsibility as regards secondary education will be fully satisfied by its maintaining one such school, and by giving assistance in the form of grants-in-aid to other schools. Such subsidiary schools must be started by private effort, and it is perfectly clear that the demand for education has now reached the stage when wealthy individuals can, at large centres of population at all events, materially help their fellow-countrymen by aiding the establishment and endowment of secondary schools, in the certainty that well-conducted schools will not suffer from a want of pupils.

The published results of University examinations bear, I fear, eloquent testimony to the poorness of the average standard of attainment now reached. In the last Matriculation examination out of 3,000 candidates only 35 passed in the first division; in the Intermediate out of 1,300 no more than 12; in that for the B.A. Degree out of 429, two only gained distinction, while in that for the M.A. Degree not a single candidate secured a place in the first division. These figures demonstrate that, owing to the weakness of the majority of the candidates, the standard aimed at has to be kept unduly low, and that boys are not educated at school as highly as they ought to be. Moreover, considering that the great majority of pupils reading English never enter the University, it is not reasonable that courses at school should be directed solely towards preparation for admission to the Matriculation examination. Both for the sake of colleges and for the students themselves we should widen our school curriculum so as to provide courses suitable to the needs of those who do not aspire to a University education or would not benefit much by it if forced to pursue it.

To this end the School-leaving Certificate has lately been instituted. It is intended to serve not only as a test of fitness for higher studies in all the various directions open to young men, but as a passport to life for a scholar whose education is intended to be completed by the time he leaves school. The practical nature of its tests, the wide range of subjects which it embraces, its elasticity, and above all the importance that will be attached to the work actually done at school during the whole period of preparation for the certificate, constitute it a very notable reform in our educational system. Not the least important feature of the scheme, in my judgment, is that it makes the vernacular of the candidate a compulsory subject. It is very gratifying to find the University so readily co-operating with Government in the introduction of the School-leaving Certificate examination. It will be a great gain to higher education in general and to scholarship and literary culture in particular, if as we hope will result from its introduction, students attending colleges are not only better grounded, but enter the University with a clearer purpose, and study with a more definite aim. One peculiar disadvantage attaching to the Matriculation examination is that the minimum standard for a pass tends to be regarded as the maximum standard of attainment in our schools, and clever boys, who reach it at an earlier age than the average scholar, have to mark time till they are old enough to enter institutions for higher study. The School-leaving Certificate is free from this serious drawback; for in some subjects higher courses are prescribed, and a student, after obtaining his certificate in one optional subject, can present himself the next year in others. The establishment of the School-leaving Certificate, in short, makes it possible for schools to rise to a higher standard than at present, and there can be little doubt that, given the opportunity, the better schools will do so. The benefit to the colleges of a general raising of the standard of school education cannot fail to be immense ; for it will enable them to confine themselves to higher work instead of spending valuable time in making up deficiencies due to lack of grounding in the schools.

In order to carry out this scheme for a School-leaving Certificate, it has been determined to introduce a sound system of manual training into secondary schools, to improve the teaching in science, both theoretical and practical, to add Botany and Agriculture as alternative subjects and to start teaching in commercial subjects in selected institutions.

Before I leave the subject of the School-leaving Certificate I have to make a statement regarding the future intentions of Government as regards the recognition of educational qualifications as a passport to Government service. The view which I hold is that Government should endeavour, so far as possible, to fill the higher posts in Government service with the graduates of the University. On the other hand, I cannot condemn too strongly the practice that has grown up of reading for the Matriculation examination with a view to qualifying thereby for Government employment. This practice is directly hostile to learning, and tends to lower the standard of the Matriculation examination. Holding these views I intend, as soon as pupils can obtain the School-leaving Certificate, i.e., by April 1910, to declare that a pass by the Matriculation of the University shall no longer be the test for any office under this Government. The two tests ordinarily required will be either a School-leaving Certificate or a degree, the latter generally being the only educational test for the higher offices. The rule should, in my opinion, be that the degree should be the only University test to be recognized in a candidate for employment by Government, but there may be special reasons to justify a pass by the Intermediate examination being accepted. The death of a parent or some other cause may make it impossible for a student who has entered a college, with the intention of proceeding to a degree, from carrying out his intention. To meet such cases, which will be rare, provision will be made that a pass by the Intermediate examination may in special circumstances be sometimes allowed as the test for certain offices.

I have mentioned the establishment of a model high school in each district, and the introduction of the School-leaving Certificate as the two most momentous educational changes recently introduced by the Government. It has also been active in directing its attention towards encouraging different forms of practical education. It has established experimental weaving schools at three centres and proposes to have a central weaving school at Benares: it is building one new industrial school as well as enlarging the one at Lucknow, and contemplates building a third one: the building of a school of design at Lucknow and of a school of carpentry at Bareilly has actually been taken in hand. Later on it hopes to establish a school for tanning leather by the chrome process, and it may be possible to start a school for the necessary cultivation of the humble art of cookery. It has submitted for the sanction of higher authority a proposal for the establishment of a technological institute to undertake industrial research, and to train the educated classes to be managers, overseers, foremen, and investigators. An agricultural college is under construction, and will, it is hoped, be opened next year. The building of the Medical College and of the hospital attached to it, equipped with all modern requirements, will be commenced as soon as the sanction of the Government of India and Secretary of State is received to the plans and estimates. The Government has contributed a lakh of rupees to the Law College. It has established a training college at Allahabad, which, from next session, will be reserved for graduates and is about to establish at Lucknow one for students who have not graduated. In time, I hope that the latter also will consist mainly of graduates.

I have said enough to show that the Government has been of late doing its utmost in order to provide systems of education which will fit the educated community for varied walks in life. It is for the University now to undertake its part also in this beneficent work. The view that I would urge is that the Indian Universities are essentially Universities of the people, and that, if they are to fulfil their purpose, they must provide courses of instruction suited to the many-sided activities of the people, the development of which can alone be relied on to ensure continued prosperity to the country. I wish to see the University extend its influence over other forms of education with which it has now no concern. Holding this view I think it a pity that the Faculty of Engineering has been abolished, and that the University does not extend its help to the Thomason College at Roorkee. The result of this indifference was that at the sittings of the Industrial Conference at Naini Tal last year there was a very pronounced feeling of opposition to the suggestion that it would be desirable to secure the affiliation of the technological institute, when established, to the University. I believe that a somewhat similar feeling has led to the determination of the agricultural college to be a thing apart from the University. It is to me personally a matter of great regret that the University has made no attempt to adopt the recommendation of the Universities' Commission that it should foster instruction in commercial subjects. Having been a party to the recommendation I cannot but regard it as a reproach that your University has hitherto ignored it altogether. The time has hardly come here yet for the introduction of a Faculty of the Science of Commerce, for which Mr. D. E. Wacha has so ably pleaded in Bombay, but I should hope that this will only be a matter of time. And I sincerely trust that it will not be long before the University will be anxious to extend its authority over, and to give its countenance to, all institutions in the Province that have for their object the training of young men in all the different forms of knowledge requisite to enable them to pursue courses in commerce, industry and industrial research, engineering, agriculture and medicine, as well as in the purely literary professions of pedagogy and law and such avenues of Government employment as demand literary qualifications.

My interest in all matters connected with education, and the fact that I was a member of the Indian Universities' Commission, have led me to examine the recent minutes of your University, and its prospectus of studies with a view to tracing the steps which it has been taking since the passing of the Act of 1904 towards reform on the lines suggested by the Commission and with a view to meeting the expanding needs of the province. You will perhaps be interested to learn the impressions left by such an inquiry upon my mind.

To begin at the lowest rung of the University ladder, the Matriculation examination, it is refreshing to notice that, in totally breaking with the hoary tradition of Euclid and prescribing in its place a syllabus in geometry on modern lines, you took a very important step and introduced into high schools the method of study upon which all true science teaching rests. But, having gone so far, you seem to have thought that your business with the schools had ended; for you abolished the School-final examination, which had till then served as the modern side of your test for admission to the University; you permitted by your regulations schools which obtained recognition in one alternative subject to teach any or all of the alternatives prescribed without regard to the provision made in them for so doing; and, further, your Syndicate ruled that scholars from unrecognized schools were admissible to the Matriculation examination as private candidates. But, from more recent minutes, I gather that these were rather lapses due to confusion arising out of a period of change than measures of deliberate policy; for, as things began to settle down, wiser counsels prevailed. The University has made ample amends for the abolition of the School-final examination by accepting the lately instituted School-leaving Certificate as equivalent to its Matriculation; it has strengthened its hold over the schools by requiring that recognition shall be obtained separately in each course of instruction; and it has determined that it will no longer favour unrecognized schools by permitting candidates who have not gone through a regular course of instruction to appear in the Matriculation examination.

Turning now to the changes introduced into the college courses, the decision to require students, who take Chemistry for the Intermediate examination, to go through a regular course of practical work in the laboratory is one which may be heartily commended. The University has also, by the introduction of quantitative analysis into the course in Chemistry for the B.Sc. examination, and by the inclusion of Biology in the courses for both the B.Sc. and Intermediate examinations and the consequent regrouping of the subjects for the science degree, greatly increased the practical utility of its work on the science side. The importance of the science degree is likely to grow greatly in the next few years, for preference in admission to the Medical College will be given to the holders of it and for them also the medical course will be shortened by a year: moreover, the Industrial Conference which met at Naini Tal last year has recommended that the possession of a B.Sc. degree should be accepted as evidence of a candidate's fitness for admission to the technological institute which it is proposed to establish in these provinces.

It is refreshing to find that the University has decided to extend its influence over the teaching profession by the institution of the degree of Licentiate in Teaching. No subject is more important than the training of teachers, and the Universities' Commission was emphatic that the Universities should assist in the work. The lack of properly trained teachers is indeed the greatest weakness in our schools. It is now fully recognized in Europe that it is an important function of a University to take part in the work of training teachers, and in this the younger British Universities have set a splendid example. Here we have been somewhat slow to recognize our duties in this respect, but, in constituting a Board of Studies in teaching and in instituting an examination in teaching open to graduates, the Allahabad University is doing what it can to improve the qualifications of teachers and to raise the status of the profession. The Government is following suit by making arrangements for the training of graduate teachers along the lines suggested by the Board of Studies. I am anxious to see an improvement in the qualifications and position of teachers, an uplifting of their office, and an enhancement of their dignity before the world. There is no profession which has higher duties, and none which has graver responsibilities. The task of the teacher may be exacting and at times even tedious, but there is ample reward in the influence which his work has on the world. A study of the scientific principles that make up the theory of education is an essential part of the training of a teacher. He must also be trained as a moral instructor, since true education, as opposed to mere instruction, must aim at training the heart and the conscience as well as the intellect and the memory. It will be for him to develop the will of those whom he teaches, and to inculcate in them the principles which are to guide their actions in after life. A purely intellectual education provides very inadequate armour for the battle of life, and the boy must during his time at school and college cultivate not only the intellectual activities, but also develop all the other forces of his nature and his moral qualities and instincts. A teacher must learn to exercise authority and to enforce discipline, so that his pupils may adopt a habit of obedience, which is the first element of character. But, in order that he may wield authority, he must himself have been trained in habits of self control in the disciplinary life of a training college and have made some study of the mind of the child under expert guidance.

Last, but not least, mention should be made of the establishment of a Law College by the University at Allahabad. The college is still in a rather embryo stage, and its superiority to the heterogeneous collection of Law classes attached to different colleges, which it is designed to supplant, is not yet universally accepted as a patent fact: for, notwithstanding it, some of the latter still flourish. But there can be no question that its establishment was necessary, and that in time when it has fully developed and like Aaron's rod swallowed up its rivals, it should succeed in effecting a much needed revolution in the study of Law. It is interesting also as being the first step taken towards converting the University into a teaching as well as an examining institution

All the changes recently made by the University that I have so far alluded to merit unreserved commendation, but I now come to two matters in regard to which it seems to me to be treading a wrong path. The course prescribed in English for the Matriculation examination is certainly open to grave criticism. The Universities' Commission recommended that text-books in English should not be prescribed for this examination ; that the course should be described in general terms, a list of books being given by way of illustration, and that the list should consist chiefly of descriptive and historical books and should be so long as to preclude the possibility of their being committed to memory. How little does the list of prescribed books for the Matriculation of this University conform to this recommendation ! The Prose prescribed for 1908 is "Tom Brown's School Days" Some of you have perhaps, like myself, read with much interest an article on Indian education which that distinguished educationist, the Right Hon'ble Sir Henry Craik, contributed to a newspaper on his return from a tour in India last cold weather. If so, you will remember that he seemed much astonished to find such a book in school libraries in India. His astonishment would, I am afraid, have been more profound if he had known that one Indian University actually prescribed it as a compulsory text-book to be taught in all schools ! "What meaning," he asks, "can it have for boys who have drunk in with their mother's milk ideas of formal courtesy, of studied respect for age and rank, of a personal dignity dependent on fixed rules which have the force of religion ?" To me, I confess, such a book, admirable though it may be for a boy brought up under our English public school system, seems singularly inappropriate for Indian students, and its choice, at a time when complaint is made that reverence and respect for authority are rapidly diminishing among our schoolboys, peculiarly unfortunate. The simple Poetry which the Universities' Commission urged should be taught to boys seeking to matriculate at a University, is here taken from a selection of English poetry for schools which contains, among other extracts which certainly do not appeal to me as suitable for Indian students, some from the works of a mystic poet, while four poems of no extraordinary merit are to be learned by heart!—an exercise of extremely doubtful utility for at least nine out of ten of the candidates. Surely it is desirable that there should be much more modern Prose and less Poetry in the teaching of English at this stage. Many Professors have complained to me that the prescription of these text-books interferes with the proper teaching of English, with the result that pronunciation and composition have to be neglected. A set of thoughts totally different from those which would occur to an English boy, flits through the brains of Indian boys as they read these books and the time devoted to their study is taken away from the all-important work of teaching them a practical knowledge of the language. The indifferent education in English that they receive at the high school, as a result of conforming to the curriculum laid down by the University, has this result that, when they enter the college, they are not sufficiently familiar with English to understand the lectures or to take intelligent notes of them. And this defect is increased, not corrected, by the course of reading prescribed for them after they have matriculated. The fault is in fact due to the attempt being made to teach them a smattering of English literature instead of trying to teach them English. That this fault is capable of being remedied no one can doubt. One cannot help being astonished at the facility of expression in the English Language and the grace of style that many eminent Indians have acquired, but they are mostly men of an older generation. I have found in examinations that I have conducted B.As. and even M As. incapable of composing a correct sentence in English, and the defects in Pronunciation are often even more grave than those exhibited in Composition. To my mind no duty of the University is more plain than the revision of its Prospectus regarding the study of English with the object of enabling students to acquire a more practical knowledge of the language.

The validity of teaching English at all has lately been gravely questioned by many thoughtful and cultured persons, but it is not now within the bounds of practical politics to abandon English as the medium of instruction. A knowledge of English is at any rate essential to an educated man in this work-a-day world. How can Science be studied without it? Again, every employer of labour in India will tell you that for the management of even simple machinery properly some knowledge of English is requisite. It is in fact needed for all industrial education as much or more than for all literary education. In his last Convocation address to the Calcutta University, Mr. Justice Asutosh Mukerji remarked: 'Western light should reach us through Western gates and not through lattice work in Eastern windows,' and this observation is probably as true in principle as it is happily expressed.

But, though English must perhaps remain the sole medium of instruction in our Universities, that fact does not justify the neglect of Indian Literature, which is the second matter in respect of which the University has, it seems to me, laid itself open to criticism. It is significant of the diminishing interest taken in the Vernacular Languages of this part of India that at the last final examination of schools in which the vernacular is the medium of instruction only three out of 6,322 candidates obtained distinction in either vernacular of the Province. The Universities' Commission recommended that the study of the Vernacular Languages should be encouraged at each stage of a University student's career. They urged that every boy should, on the completion of his school course, be required to pass an examination severe enough to show that he had a knowledge of his own language sufficient to enable him to express himself with ease and propriety. They recommended that Vernacular Composition should be made compulsory in every stage of the B.A. course, although they did not consider that there need be any teaching on the subject. And they suggested that the vernaculars should be introduced, in combination with English, as a subject for the M.A. examination, the examination for that degree in the vernacular being of such a character as to ensure a thorough and scholarly study of the subject. To what extent has the University endeavoured to encourage the study of the Vernacular in pursuance of these suggestions? How many of its Hindu graduates could read that great work, Tulsi Das's Ramayana, with full understanding? Yet in it are enshrined in beautiful and feeling language eternal truths and some of the most sublime passages of the Hindu religion. It seems almost inconceivable that it should be possible for a student to go through his whole career without studying his own Vernacular. Yet many do so, and the complaint that graduates often cannot use their own tongue familiarly is not without some foundation in fact. It cannot be said that the reason why Oriental studies do not flourish is that competent teaching is not available. While it would be too much to expect all colleges to make adequate provision for Oriental studies, those who wish to study Sanskrit have at the Queen's College and the Sanskrit College attached to it facilities which are not to be surpassed perhaps in any other part of India, and by the munificence of Munshi Madho Lal very generous scholarships have been provided there to help deserving scholars. Those who wish to study Arabic up to the highest standard and to undertake research work can obtain at the Muhammadan Anglo-Oriental College, Aligarh, all the help they need, now that the college authorities with the help of Government have been enabled to establish a strong department for the promotion of Arabic studies. But Oriental classics and the vernaculars remain alike neglected.

There is a moral danger involved in this growing neglect of the literature of the mother country by young Indians. What is there to hold them to the faith of their fathers, what anchor have they to help them to ride out the storms of life? While they remain largely in ignorance of the thoughts and beliefs of their own people, they acquire in the process of education but a superficial acquaintance with those of Europe. The mind of the student, like a balloon cut adrift from its moorings, soars aloft into regions where all is strange and unfamiliar, where without means of guidance and without ballast it drifts hither and thither at the mercy of every current of air, and the higher it soars the more does that which it left behind in its ascent lose its true perspective and appear insignificant and trivial. The literature which we put before our students has its roots in a European past in which they have no part, and is based upon beliefs and ideas which are strange and often meaningless to them. Thus it happens that they have no background into which to put the mental images their reading brings before them, and if the views of life they form are distorted and out of focus with its realities, is this a result at which we need be surprised? By the encouragement of a wider and deeper study of the works of great Indian thinkers and poets all that is best in the beliefs and customs of the country might be preserved; while a systematic cultivation of the Vernacular Languages would lead to their being more frequently employed by men of education for the expression of their thoughts. Not only might this result in a great enriching of vernacular literature but also in the elevation of the tone of the Vernacular Press.

To pass on to other matters, it is very satisfactory to find that, after some delay in getting to work, the University has made a great effort, and practically completed the preliminary Inspection of its Colleges. The Board of Inspectors appointed by it for the purpose has, at no little sacrifice on the part of its members, already visited and reported to the Syndicate on nearly every college within the University's jurisdiction, and has brought to light, besides the weakness of individual institutions, certain general defects which call for remedy. The Syndicate, after full consideration of the Report, have laid down certain Principles in the form of General Recommendations for the guidance of colleges. These mainly deal with the conditions of teaching and with the relations of schools and colleges, and they seem to me to constitute a very sensible set of instructions. The Universities' Commission recommended a gradual separation of school and college classes wherever this did not exist, and, in emphasizing the importance of dividing school and college life, the Syndicate of this University have taken the first step towards giving effect to that recommendation. I hope that no opportunity will be lost of insisting upon the completion of this measure of reform, for the academic atmosphere necessary to a college cannot be secured where schoolboys mix with college students, nor can the discipline needed in a school be maintained where schoolboys learn a precocious independence from college students.

From this necessarily incomplete survey of the recent efforts of the University to improve its system it is evident that it has entered upon the task of reform in a spirit of real earnestness, that, if some matters have hitherto received inadequate attention, the progress made has been considerable in many directions, and that the future is full of promise. The new era bids fair to be one of wider usefulness due to a clearer recognition by the University of its relations to the world around it. Higher education in India has of late been charged with being the cause of all the political troubles that now afflict the country, and thoughtful men have declared the system to be pursuing lines that are utterly wrong and unsuitable. That I sympathize to some extent with the latter of these views will be evident from the remarks that I have made in the course of this address to you. If the Indian Universities will now realize to the full the great part which they can play in helping forward the industrial expansion of the country, they should be able to silence their critics by becoming the chief agents in producing prosperity and contentment.

I trust that in nothing that I have said I shall have given to any of my hearers an impression that I am in any sense an opponent of higher education. I am on the contrary, a whole-hearted believer in it. I do indeed think that your standards should be raised, and that you should endeavour to make a degree at your University a more valuable educational qualification than it is at present. And I also think that you should extend your activities and draw within your fold the best intellects not only among those whose taste is literature, but also among those whose ambition is to distinguish themselves in practical and scientific pursuits. As one whose own education both at a public school and Oxford was of a purely literary character, I am not likely to under-rate the value of such an education. There can be no higher ideal than the pursuit of knowledge for its own sake. But you have a long way to go before you can attain to that ideal, and the first thing that should, in my judgment, be done is to cut yourselves adrift from any encumbrances which interfere with its attainment. The first encumbrance to the improvement of learning that it is desirable that you should remove is the large body of students who matriculate for a purpose quite apart from that for which the University exists, who have no desire to secure a degree, and whose entry into the colleges results in the lowering of your standards. On the other hand, I long to see you open your doors more enthusiastically to young men, with intellects qualified to benefit from a University education, who desire to follow scientific studies leading them on to practical pursuits. For the public service, as well as for all the higher forms of employment that may in time result from the industrial development of this splendid country, we want the best educated men that the University can turn out. And this gives me a good opportunity of saying that owing to the increased recruitment that is necessary for the highest service on the executive side of the administration recruited in India—I mean the Provincial Service—I am enabled to announce that I hope in future to be able to appoint annually seven instead of three probationary Deputy Collectors. I have recommended to the Government of India that these should all be graduates of your University, that three should, as at present, be selected from among the sons of Talukdars or large landholders, two from among families, members of which have already done good service to the State, and two in communication with the Vice-Chancellor from among the most distinguished graduates of the University. The selection of the two last-mentioned probationers cannot of course be made solely on the ground of academic attainments, for it is essential that attention should also be paid to character and physique. This announcement will, I hope, serve to remove any misapprehension that may exist as to my attitude towards higher education. But that every seeker after education in this country, whatever be his aim in life, should go through a University course is an idea which appears to me to be radically unsound. Nor am I ready to admit that a greater strictness in testing candidates for admission to the University can fairly be regarded as a stroke at higher education, though it may tend to reduce the number of undergraduates.

I come now to the subject of discipline and moral training. In their Report the Universities' Commission remarked: 'Indian students are rarely guilty of disorder,' and they stated that they did not find it necessary to make any definite recommendation in regard to discipline. Difficulties have since arisen sometimes even at institutions which, at the time when these remarks were penned, appeared to be the best models in the country for the maintenance of discipline. In ancient times, and not so very long ago, India held a well-deserved reputation for courtly manners, and the younger members of society respected the authority and venerated the precepts of their elders. The advance of Democracy all over the world, whatever the benefits that it has brought with it, has certainly been accompanied by a fall in the standard of manners. India is not the only country that has suffered, but by reason of the high reputation that she bore in the past in this respect, her lapse is the more noticeable. The state of affairs that one sees around presents indeed a vivid contrast to the former conditions that existed in India, where respect for position and authority was one of the first duties inculcated on every student. For this result, the secular form of our educational system must be in some measures held responsible. An attempt was made in these Provinces some years ago to remove the defect inherent in it by permitting religious teaching in the schoolhouse outside school hours. The experiment, I regret to say, did not meet with any success. It is to be repeated in the State of Mysore, and it will be very interesting to watch the result. The difficulties of providing religious instruction in schools, the property of a Government pledged to religious neutrality, seem to be insuperable, but we can at all events do more than is done at present to develop character by giving closer attention to moral training, which was so conspicuous a feature of education in ancient India. I think that we should strive to effect a great improvement in our methods in this respect, and I welcome the action of societies like the Nadwat-ul-Ulama and the Sri Bharat Dharma Mahamandal as likely to be very beneficial. But what is even more necessary is that parents should insist on stricter discipline in the home, and should lead their boys to realize that the first duty of a student is obedience. The failure of boys and young men to act up to this duty reacts indeed upon the parents, but it cannot fail to cause surprise that the latter seem to view the evil with folded hands, and show little energy in endeavouring to counteract it. But if it be true that the attitude and actions of students in some parts of the country—and in them must be included some of the institutions affiliated to this University—have merited some condemnation, it is equally true that their critics have sometimes exceeded the limits of proper criticism. I confess that I have read with great pain a general denunciation of Indian students by one of my fellow-countrymen in a magazine article, in which he has made a violent attack on their morality. It is unfortunately the case that the students in some large towns are exposed to much more temptation in India than in many of the educational centres of Europe, and sufficient precautions have not always been taken to save them from such temptation. But the general accusation of immorality is a gross libel on the students of the Province, in which the writer himself served, and I wish to take this public opportunity—and the Vice-Chancellor and the Director of Public Instruction desire to associate themselves with me—of assuring the parents and guardians of students of institutions affiliated to this University, and the students themselves, that I have no doubt whatever that it is untrue of them generally. There is probably no fold in which there are not some black sheep, but where is the justice of condemning the whole of a flock for the faults of a small portion of it? I do, however, think that it behoves all parents in India—and I speak not only of Indian parents but of Europeans and Eurasians—to pay greater attention to maintaining their authority within the home. No student who has been accustomed to have his way without feeling the authority of his parents is in the least likely, when he joins a school or college, to take kindly to the first principle of moral education, namely, the enforcement of obedience.

Having referred to the matter of discipline I am now led to say a few words about the question of the relation of students to Politics. In speaking of Politics in their relation to students, it is necessary to draw a distinct line between controversial or partizan Politics and the study of questions relating to the civic rights and duties of individuals. No one could dispute the axiom that every citizen should study the Politics of the State to which he belongs, but surely it is equally axiomatic that, if he wishes to enter public life, he should first qualify himself for it by full and careful preparation. Nobody is fitted to participate in political life until he has made a diligent study of History, Political Economy and the principles of Ethics and Jurisprudence. Citizens must recognize that, if they have rights, they have also duties, but a student, while still under instruction, is not competent either to exercise the one properly, or to realize the full obligations of the other. While, however, I think it most undesirable that students should mingle in controversial or partizan Politics, it is right that every boy should be brought up in a spirit of obedience to the Government under which he lives. Every religion that has had any influence over the world's history has inculcated the duty of obedience to the temporal power, and every boy should be taught to look with pride on the fact that he will one day become a citizen of no mean State or Empire. Beyond that, till he has qualified himself to enter the world and the time has come when he can undertake the duties and exercise the rights of a citizen, he should not, in my judgment, carry his connexion with Politics.

When I was here in August last I addressed a public audience on the subject of the political situation of the country, and denounced the attempts made in certain parts of India to create disorder and bring about a state of anarchy. It is not necessary to go over the same ground again, nor, if it were, would the present occasion, when I am addressing an assembly consisting mainly of the graduate and under-graduate members of this University on questions connected with the administration of the University, be appropriate. But I have one special word to say to you in this matter, and I can best do this by referring you to the words spoken by Lord Rosebery when he was recently installed as Chancellor of the Glasgow University. He showed how the progress of that old and famous seat of learning had been regularly arrested during stormy periods of Scottish history and that it had made no steady growth until the union of the Crowns of England and Scotland gave the country lasting peace. Commenting upon this he went on to say: "But the broad sweep of fact remains the same: the Universities could not thrive till the country thrived: when the State is troubled, the shrines of learning languish." I ask you to lay these wise reflections to heart. For the proper development of University ideals peace and contentment must reign throughout the country. They cannot be pursued with any prospect of success in a country torn by bitter feuds and racial animosities. Learning, no more than commerce, can thrive till the country is at peace. It is the duty of the true patriot to assist the State in securing peace and quiet within its borders, and to co-operate with it also in putting down disorder. Signs of a great awakening are not wanting, but for its realization tranquillity is essential throughout the length and breadth of the Indian continent.

I have detained you for a long time," but before I conclude I should like to say a word about the functions of the University over and above those which may be described as collegiate, since they are concerned with the preparation and testing of young men for degree examinations. To fulfil its functions completely a University must make provision also for higher and more advanced courses of study. Collegiate studies are, so to say, disciplinary and require definite methods of instruction, but University studies should be freer and should require the student 'to test and observe rather than to hear and recite,' to regard the teacher more in the light of a friendly guide and colleague and to adopt the attitude of an inquirer instead of a mere learner. The Universities' Commission suggested a way in which Universities might justify their existence as teaching bodies by making further and better provision for advanced courses of study. So far, this University has not been able to do more than establish a Law School. Apart from professional studies, such as those of Medicine and Law, there are several branches of learning in which facilities for further study and research might suitably be afforded. I do not wish to see the University move too fast so as to run any risk of ruining its authority by attempting more than it is equipped to carry out. Much still remains to be done before it is fully qualified to exercise in all branches of education the functions of an examining and testing body, and towards the perfection of this side of its utility its main energies will have for some time to be directed. But I do hope that it will not lose sight of the duty of encouraging the pursuit of knowledge for its own sake, since otherwise it can never become a University in the proper sense, which has been well described as 'a place for life training of the highest order.' To satisfy these conditions provision must be made for Research. Indian Economics are now to be a subject for the M.A. degree. The further study of them could not fail to be of great benefit to the country. It is surely a remarkable fact that so little attention has yet been given by Indian students to a methodical and scientific study of the history of their own country, its antiquities, social progress and economical condition, and that such studies, and the deeper linguistic researches, should have been mainly left hitherto to be taken up by European and American scholars. In this Province Sanskrit, Philology, Arabic, Pali (the Province having been the centre of Buddhist lore and the scene of much of the life of Buddha), Agriculture, Agricultural Chemistry and Botany, as well as Historical and Economical Researches, present themselves as subjects to which scholars and investigators might turn their mind. The Allahabad University is not without such men. It would be well if it could see its way to employing them to lecture on their special subjects, so that they might have wider opportunities of inspiring the younger generation with their own love of learning. Men of wealth in India have hitherto bestowed their patronage but sparingly on the advancement of learning, but here are objects upon which private liberality would be excellently bestowed. The example of America, where the cause of learning has been so greatly assisted by lavish gifts from private citizens, is one which it is to be desired that India would more closely imitate.
